

FARMERS SCORE TRIUMPH HERE

Fourteenth Annual Farm and Home Week Convention One of Most Successful Ever in Session at U. of K.

BANQUET IS BIG FEATURE

The fourteenth annual Farm and Home Week Convention, which was held at the University of Kentucky during the past week, from January 23-29 inclusive, was one of the most successful conventions which has ever been in session here.

A well-balanced, constructive set of lectures and demonstrations were given under the management of N. R. Elliott, of the College of Agriculture, who was in charge of the program for the convention, and the meetings dealt with the practical sides of farm culture, for both men and women. Soils, crops, and all livestock as well as marketing problems were included in the discussions.

Among the prominent speakers for the men's meetings were Lucius C. Wilson, Chicago financier, who gave a most instructive talk on "Farm Organizations"; H. A. Morgan, president of the University of Tennessee, who gave one of the outstanding speeches of the convention—"Economic Facts About Kentucky."

The women's meetings, which were held at White Hall, were highly constructive and interesting. Mrs. Mignon Lott, who gave a lecture and demonstration on "Recreation for Farm Women," and Mrs. Clara D. Judson, of Chicago, known as "the woman banker," were among the features of their programs.

A fine attendance was had at the banquet, which was held on Thursday night, at the Hotel Lafayette.

STUDENTS RESOLVE TO MAKE BETTER GRADES

to forgive and forget. As long as there are professors and students, the walls of the latter will rent the air with pathetic sounds. A hundred years from now no one will know that these students flunked, or that the professor won the cup for the highest number of "E's". They both go to make up life, and they both have four months in which to redeem themselves in the others' eye.

sphere, came a voice.

"How now, Smith?"

I recognized the soprano notes of my roommate—a noise something similar to an adult wolf howlin' affectionately in your ear.

"How come this 'how now' stuff?" I inquires.

He gives me one of them sympathetic once-overs and responds more or less sweetly, like this, "Why, you long, drawn-out ignoramus. Ain't you had no Shakespeare?"

No, I admits, "but I figure that some good tonic or liniment like that would go over big at this here abode of learnin' right now. What's repposin' on your chest so heavy that you presume to intrude upon my meditations?"

The rest of the conversation can't very well be published, even in this age of free speech, but when the smoke had mostly drifted over toward the administration building, I found out that the legislature was holdin' forth down at the capitol, and the rabble was cordially invited to attend. Ted says I hadn't ought to miss a chance like that.

Adjourn to Legislature

We climbed into a bus down by the hotel, and after throwin' some baggage up on top with the livestock, we managed to assume a posture somewhat like a pair of sirens, and didn't have to sit on somebody's lap after all. We were duly unloaded in Frankfort, hopped a municipal caboose and proceeded at a dignified and conservative pace to the capital where the big rodeo was bein' held.

Our caboose was about played out when we came to the capitol so we got out and walked the rest of the way. We aimed for about where we figured the front door ought to be. That's where it was, so we ambled inside, and up to a gallery and gazed upon the chosen few.

"This here is the house of representatives," contributes McDowell.

"Yes?" I says.

"Yes," he says.

Arguing Like Politicians

They was arguin' as politicians will, and the chief point of contention at the time was as to who was supposed to be talkin'. There was about six explainin' to each other that they had the floor but they finally got it straightened out so that there was only three goin' at once. Then another one decided he was outclassed and the remaining two gentlemen began to debate. It seemed that one gentleman followed a discourse in which it developed that one gentleman was a scoundrel and the other was another, etc.

We didn't seem to be gettin' very far so we went over to see if there was any casualties in the senate. They was doin' very well when we arrived, and was leisurely discussin' whether Robert Fulton hadn't enjoyed the privilege of bein' the inventor of the steamboat long enough. Some senator was in favor of Fitch havin' a whack at it for a while. Another senator arose and said that he still believed that Columbus discovered America and suggested that they let history alone. They had a vote, Fitch lost and I began to worry about the prospects of rations. We wandered back to town found a restaurant, and trailed back to Lexington.

on the subject, Resolved: "That the air services of the United States should be combined in a separate department of the service." A three-minute rebuttal speech was also required.

At 4 o'clock Monday afternoon the oratorical contest was held in the Little theater for the purpose of choosing a student to represent the university in the Kentucky Oratorical Association and in the regional contest, should the university win the state contest. G. H. Miley, speaking on the subject, "The World Wrapped in Universal Law," was declared the winner over eight other contestants. The judges were Dr. McFarland, Professor Shackelford and Professor McIntyre.

Oratorical Contest in March

The Kentucky Oratorical Association will hold its annual contest this year at the university early in March and the winner of this contest will entertain the participants in the divisional contest later in the year. In this meeting orators from Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin will compete with the Kentucky winner for divisional honors.

of seeing each pupil personally, the amount was added to the regular registration fee. The new students were also taxed an extra 50 cents to defray expenses of their physical examination, and all students were required to pay an additional fee of 30 cents for a mail box in the university post office. This is the first semester that the university has had a system of individual mail boxes and the combinations for these will be given out at the bookstore. The advent of these on the campus will eliminate the excuses which students so often offer to their respective deans that they

BATTLE CRIES

The following men have been graduated from the advanced course of the R. O. T. C. of the University of Kentucky and have received their commissions as Second Lieutenants in the Reserve Corps:

- H. R. Brown, cadet captain in the R. O. T. C.
- R. L. Spears, cadet first lieutenant in the R. O. T. C.
- Melbourne Mills, cadet captain in the R. O. T. C.
- J. P. Holtzclaw, Jr., cadet first lieutenant in the R. O. T. C.

The applications of 38 other members of the advanced course for commissions to be received in the spring or summer have been approved by President McVey and Colonel Hobbs and have been sent in to the corps area commander. Fourteen other applications are ready to go in, making a total of 52 men from this university who will receive their commissions this spring.

The University of Kentucky rifle team won its match with the rifle team of the University of South Dakota with an individual high score of 382 points, made by O. B. Travis. Not only did the sharpshooters win as a whole but the first four winners of individual scores were members of the Kentucky team. These men were O. B. Travis, E. T. Bullock, W. M. Anderson and W. E. Weems. The individual scores of these four men ranged from 374 to 382.

did not receive a notice to appear in said office.

The total enrollment last semester was 2,166 and the number registered up until Wednesday noon shows a decrease of about 300 pupils. The registrar's office, however, expected many more students to be enrolled during the rest of the week, believing that late arrivals will materially increase the number of students. It is also thought that the trial of Ed Harris may have kept some students at home longer than they would otherwise have remained.

town had made a point, they had three field goals to their credit. The Cubs quickly recovered from their unconscious state, and shot goals with amazing rapidity, until they were only one point behind the Kittens. This state of affairs existed until near the end of the game. The Kittens, realizing their peril, revived their efforts enough to nose out the Cubs by three points.

Mills was the outstanding performer for Georgetown, while Marshall and Knadler proved to be the shining lights for Kentucky.

This was the third straight win for the Kittens, having defeated the Kentucky Wesleyan Frosh and the Hazard High School five by decisive margins.

The summary:

- Georgetown (28) Pos. Kentucky (31)
- Mattingly F Knadler (10)
- Hawkins (16) F McGinnis (8)
- Anderson (4) C Phipps
- Kemper G Gilb
- Mills (4) G Dees

Substitutions: Kentucky—Heiger (11), Marshall (2), Wieman; Georgetown—Wallace (2), McDonald (2).
