GET TOGETHER!

But they Didn't Do It Until Last Night at the Depot.

Billie Breckinridge can't draw pictures alongside our baseball club, especially when it is on its return home after such a successful tour as the one to Cynthiana was.

Strangers who saw the procession last night from the train to the hotel thought it was a detachment of Coxeyites on their way home from Washington City.

The excitement at the K. C. Depot was caused by the citizens turning out en masse to welcome Manager Watson's Windbeaters' return home.

On Monday evening when the news flashed over the wires that the "best amateur team in the whole state" had been defeated by the Cynthians, Buek Goodman and his crowd actually laughed.

This paper thought the "umpire did it," and that on the next day they would send the old one up in a balloon and get a new one, but it seems as though the same old "Gaffney" did the umpiring yesterday, for a score 18 to 5 was what made the people say "Police!"

And this cry called to arms the whole city, who went to the train last evening to meet the boys and tell them how much they thought of their "good playing."

Billie Stockton, the ex Manager, was Chairman of the Reception Committee, and by some tall hustling he rallied about six hundred of the faithful and a drum corps at the depot.

Jimmie Hunt the fifer, when the train whistled, was told to turn to "No. 32 in the old book," and be ready when the boys got off the train.

The locals had gone down in defeat, but it was, according to the telegrams, so overwhelming it didn't have the right ring, hence the reception.

As soon as the train stopped the players were captured and placed at the head of the procession, the band struck up No. 32 in the old book, "Don't Give Up the Ship," Billie Stockton's commanding voice sang out "Fall in!" and then "March!" and down the street went the drum corps, the team and the fans in order, with Joseph H. Dodson, John Bramel, Russell Warder and William Case all up near the band.

It was rumored that each one carried a banner, but this is not so.

When the procession arrived at the Central they all "got together" around the water cooler, where John Eitel demanded to know the name of the "rotten umpire," and they all took sick.

And then Jimmy Hunt played No. 6 in the new book, "See, the Conquering Hero Comes," when some body announced the arrival of that package of baseball shoes.

Well, boys, they did the best they could. When the umpire said "play ball," the boys didn't know how, that's all.

AT MAYSLICK.

A Great Function at a Great County Residence.

The large and spacious residence of Mr. Eneas Myall was thrown open last Thursday evening to the Mayslick people that they might enjoy a feast of music and a flow of soul, such as is rarely vouchsafed to mortals here below.

Rev. F. M. Tinder, one of Mayslick's best loved Pastors and most popular citizens, called for the selections, and each was applauded to the echo.

Miss King of Athens, Ala., is a composer of music, and gave us some of her most exquisite creations. And as she cooed and warbled and trilled all the love notes of all the birds, it was enough to make the rocks and the stones go to love-making and the very leaves on the trees to whisper together.

Dr. Siervers of Cincinnati, O., sang a lovely ballad, and was a prime favorite of the evening.

Mrs. Fanny Jamison Weatherstone of Asheville, N.C., has been especially gifted with a rich, round voice, and it was in perfect condition as she recounted the history of her "Sailor Lad." Her bright little daughter Rhea was the star of the evening, twinkling among the planets.

Mrs. Hattie Mitchell Blatterman won the hearts of all who listened, as her finely trained voice insisted upon what we all know, that particular element, which, being withdrawn, "makes the town feel so dull."

Miss Ida Roff's talent is so widely known and unhesitatingly accepted that to mention the perfection of her impersonations for our entertainment would be to "yield refined gold."

Miss Clay and Miss Parry gave us some delightful instrumental music, and Mr. A. C. Hopkins a tenor solo in his own good style.

A feature of the evening was a quartette, of which several young ladies declared they never heard but one part, and that was the bass. Professor Chandler should educate the youth of Mayslick so they might better distinguish the parts in music.

No one was forgotten in this social gathering, and when our old teacher, Mrs. Orr of Birmingham, Ala., was called upon to speak a few words to her pupils, she would have been less than human if she had failed to respond to the hearty applause which greeted the very mention of her name.

She paid a well deserved tribute to the dear old Kentucky homes of Mayslick and Mason county, presided over by so many of her "girls and boys," and if here and there a bright eye moistened it was the only tear of the evening.

Her parting words were followed by a full chorus of "The Old Kentucky Home," sung as only Kentuckians can sing it, and she alone can tell how that old familiar song will echo down the years until the day of her life has ended and the shadows fall at its close.

Let us keep our memory to this delightful August evening, freighted with moonlight and music, and let our people come together again to know each other better and to become refreshed and rejuvenated by such beautiful influences.

Did you ever notice that those fellows who are so anxious for the office to seek the man, always put themselves in the place where they think the office is going to hunt for him?

A CHARACTERISTIC LETTER.

From the Pen of One Who Knows How to Write Such Epistles.

TILTON, KY., August 20th, 1894.

Bro. Davis: Having been indisposed for some time, my physician prescribed a visit to the country, and not being in possession of the needed commodity necessary to attend a summer resort, I was compelled to call on my "country cousins" for succor in this hour of affliction.

I left Maysville last Saturday to seek a health inspiring place in the climate of old Fleming. The beautiful rays of the setting sun had disappeared, and in a beautiful twilight, while gentle zephyrs wafted through tall, majestic trees, we alighted at a beautiful mansion, where beautiful flowers lined the broad walk, laden with sweet fragrance, partaking an Edenic nature, while the plaintive tones of the turtle dove were heard in the distance.

While sitting on a broad piazza drinking in the beauty and grandeur of the home of my childhood the moon arose above the hill beyond, a beautiful valley adding additional luster to the scene.

By the way, Bro. Davis, I find THE LEDGER goes peering through distance like the glory of the sun—all the world around. And again in my journey I find the "mystic letters three" standing out in bold relief on the magnificent structure opposite THE LEDGER office are to be seen in almost every household.

As I sit beneath the broad boughs of a majestic tree, drinking in the grandeur of Nature, I feel inspired to dwell on the beauties thereof as they are revealed by Nature's God.

A close study of Nature reveals the fact that there is a glory of the day and a glory of the night. The turtle dove in plaintive tones sings a solemn requiem at the close of the day. The owl takes no pleasure in the day, but finds his glory in the silence of the night, oftentimes disturbing the quietude of God's grandest creation, that of man.

Nature oftentimes withholds reason, leaving a brain darkened with clouds, casting a shadow over a fearful drama of life, demonstrating the fact that "man was made to mourn."

"To be or not to be is the question. Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, or to take up arms against a sea of trouble and by opposing end them."
