THREE TIPS FOR

Researching Employers

1.

► Get info before an interview

Before you go into a job interview, it's important that you find some information about the company you might be working for. You want to understand the basics of what the company does and how your job would fit into that mission.

► Find first-hand information

The Internet is a great place to look for background about a potential employer, but it's not always trustworthy. If possible, talk to people who work at the company to see what they really think about it and whether you would be a good fit.

3.

► Don't be creepy

There's a fine line between researching a potential employer and prying into personal or private information. Sometimes the Internet makes it too easy to cross this line, so be careful about what kind of details you share. You want to be knowledgeable and curious, not nosy.

JOB PROFILE ACTUARY

► TASKS: Through their knowledge of statistics, finance, and business, actuaries assess the risk of events occurring and help create policies for businesses and clients that minimize the cost of that risk. For this reason, actuaries are essential to the insurance industry.

► QUALIFICATIONS: # A strong background in mathematics is essential.

Actuaries generally have a bachelor's degree and must pass a series of examinations—often taking 4 to 8 years—to gain full professional status.

► PAY: Median annual wages of actuaries were $84,810 in May 2008. The middle 50 percent earned between $62,020 and $119,110. According to the National Association of Colleges and Employers, annual starting salaries for graduates with a bachelor's degree in actuarial science averaged $56,320 in July 2009.
