

war for the Union. Amid perplexities, temptations and dangers, greater, perhaps, than those that threatened any other State, she had striven for Union and peace; and, when peace was seen to be unattainable, she had declared for Union and war.