

The life of the Theatre is inevitably related to the life of the University. It is through the promise of fulfillment both emotionally and physically that the life lines of the Theatre and the University become entwined. Just what is the theatre to each person involved in the University community? Man's experience is interpreted in a manner which most closely approximates life in its various periods and societies. Each individual is a participant either under the lights or in the environment of a darkend house. The anticipation and excitement of each opening night; the commitment to achieve growth and responsibility through each new endeavor; the reaction generated on the stage, in the audience, or during each day's living on campus; all of these experiences enrich each student's life now and for an infinite amount of time.
