Jest Knappin'

By Paul Knapp

Hail to all first-year freshmen. The type of the new year and generations yet unborn. Being one of the numbered thousands on this campus who are never taken seriously, there is no need for me to even try to show you the narrow path of the true scholar. I can at least warn you in true gentlemanly fashion that there are those who have advice of their own to offer to the unsuspecting frosh so freshly away from the guidance of mama. Forewarned is forearmed.

Enough of this! If you took the first seriously, don't read the rest or your resistance might suffer considerably. Read on with awe, for they sure are awful.

"Who was that woman I saw you out with last night?"

"I wasn't out. I was resting my eyes."

Then there were the two nudists who quit going steady because they were seeing too much of each other.

"Why does Geraldine let all the boys kiss her?"

"She once slapped a lad who was chewing tobacco."

Over in McVey the other day I overheard two English majors discussing a common interest.

"Ye like to read?"

"Yeah."

"Watcha like to read?"

"Lil Abner, Terry 'na Pirates, 'n' Dick Tracy."

"Ye like O. Henry?"

"Nah, the nuts git in my teeth."

Then there was the fellow who had a hobby of collecting stones and putting them in his bathroom.

He had rocks in his head.

Two cockroaches lunched in a dirty old sewer and excitedly discussed the spotless, glistening new restaurant in the neighborhood from which they had been barred.

"I hear," said one, "that the refrigerators shine like polished silver. The shelves are clear as a whistle. The floors sparkle like diamonds. It's so clean..."

"Please," said the second in disgust, nibbling on a moldy roll. "Not while I'm eating."

'How To Stay In College,' From A Short Street Bar

"How to Stay in College" is the title of this sound advice compiled by Robert Tyson, Department of Psychology and Philosophy, Hunter College, New York. The manuscript was found on the floor of a Short Street bar while searching for filler material for this week's Kernel.

(1) Bring the professor newspaper clippings dealing with his subject. Demonstrate "fery" interest, and gives him timely items to mention to the class. If you can't find clippings dealing with his subject bring any clippings at random. He thinks everything deals with his subject.

(2) Look alert. Takes notes eagerly. If you look at your watch, don't stare at it unbelievably and shake it.

(3) Nod frequently and murmur. "How true!" To you, this seems exaggerated. To him, it's quite objective.

(4) Sit in front, near him. (Applies only if you intend to stay awake.) If you're going to all the trouble of making a good impression, you might as well let him know who you are, especially in a large class.

(5) Laugh at his jokes. You can tell. If he looks up from his notes and smiles expectantly, he has told a joke.

(6) Ask for outside reading. You don't have to read it. Just ask.

(7) If you must sleep, arrange to be called at the end of the hour. It creates an unfavorable impression if the rest of the class has left and you sit there alone, dozing.

(8) Be sure the book you read during the lecture looks like a book from the course. If you do math in psychology class and psychology in math class, match the books for size and color.

(9) Ask any questions you think he can answer. Conversely, avoid announcing that you have found the answer to a question he couldn't answer, and in your younger brother's second-grade reader at that.

(10) Call attention to his writing. Produces an exquisitely pleasant experience connected with you. If you know he's written a book or an article ask in class if he wrote it.

As to whether or not you want to do some work, in addition to all this, well, it's controversial and up to the individual.
