My dear Mother,

As I have an opportunity of sending a letter this morning I will write a few lines, it will not give me time for more. I want to write Sister also a short letter. I suppose you got Sister's letter saying that we had arrived all safely. Sister left here Saturday morning and I expect she had quite a pleasant journey. Lucy Tombridge and Lydia Deneist went to the train to see her at Cynthiaana, and they said there was a young gentleman (Mr. Railey I suppose) and some young lady she knew with her. We have had a very pleasant time thus far,
