

CHOOSE CLAY FOR HALL OF FAME

Ask Kentuckians to Contribute Funds For Bronze Bust of Prominent Statesman; Ceremony Will Be In May.

Henry Clay was chosen for the Hall of Fame at the first election in 1900 by the College of Electors consisting of one hundred distinguished persons throughout the country. Most of those who were chosen at the same time have been honored by the customary bronze bust which is placed above the tablet in the Colonnade at University Heights. Clay has waited twenty-five years for this tribute, and the Director of the Hall of Fame, Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, has very appropriately invited Kentuckians to contribute to the relatively small fund of $3,000 which in each instance is necessary to provide and install a bust. Readers of this paragraph throughout the state are respectfully invited to send their contributions for this purpose in however small amount, to the Editor of the Courier-Journal. If the amount is contributed promptly, the bust will be unveiled on the tenth of May with distinguished ceremonies, along with those of Louis Agassiz, the scientist, Morse the inventor of the telegraph, President Madison, John Paul Jones, and possibly others. The director confidently counts on the pride of Kentuckians to erect this memorial to the greatest figure identified with the state.

Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass.—Undergraduates at Cambridge, "bored stiff," have started a lively campaign against what is described as the "insipidity and utter uselessness" of the ordinary lecture to which they have to listen. They complain that a majority of the lectures are either inaudible or unintelligible, or both.

M'LEOD TALKS ON BEHAVIORISM

Philosophy and Life Are Not to Be Divorced, Says Speaker; Outlines the Development of Psychology.

McGill University—"Behaviorism" was the topic of a paper delivered to the McGill Philosophical Society last evening by Professor R. B. McLeod. In dealing with this subject Professor McLeod first gave a general talk on philosophy and psychology. "Philosophy and Life can never be divorced," he said. Thinking has an effect on the thinker, which translates the thought into action. Philosophy is the subject which draws the sciences together in that it points out new lines of endeavor for them to pursue.

Psychology is the baby science. It has been in existence for only a little over fifty years, but in those years it has made startling progress. In psychology, as in all other sciences, fads or cults have grown up. One of these fads is Behaviorism. This fad attained the height of its popularity between 1912 and 1920, but now is fading out. In order to understand Behaviorism, something must first be known of philosophy and of psychology. Philosophy is the study of the soul. Psychology is the study of consciousness. Consciousness is the effect of 12 or 13 sensations; which involve the characteristics of intensity and duration. Consciousness is essentially introspective. One cannot study the consciousness of another.

Behaviorists Study, Objective Now behaviorism is the scientific study of this consciousness. It attempts to make the study objective. From a Behaviorist's point of view the human body consists of the sense organs, the nervous system, the muscles and the glands. Human life, is to him no more than a series of responses. These responses are either explicit or implicit, inherited or acquired. They can be analyzed into simpler terms, but their explanation is very difficult. Behaviorism regards man as little more than a machine. The weakness of the Behaviorist attitude are, first, that certain of the fundamental assumptions of the cult cannot be proved. Secondly, that the complete man is not studied. Experience is entirely omitted. Lastly, Behaviorism attempts to get away from the ever-present introspective factor. The cult, however, has its failures. Its rigid insistence on scientific methods had a beneficial effect on the whole study, and it has attempted to bring mind and matter together. At the close of Professor McLeod's lecture the meeting was thrown open for discussion, the members and Professor Caldwell offering illustrative comments and asking questions of the lecturer.

"Hoot, Mon, Luckies dinna hurt my throat or wind," says Sir Harry Lauder, celebrated star

"It takes a Scotchman to truly appreciate that wonderful toasted flavor that comes in Lucky Strikes. I've smoked Luckies for years and all this time I've been active in my work which demands a clear voice for singing and good wind for dancing. And so I say to Sandy McGregor, 'It's always a bright moonlight night with Luckies—Hoot, Mon, they dinna hurt my wind or throat.'"

"The Cream of the Tobacco Crop" for Lucky Strikes

says tobacco loose-leaf warehouseman
"I buy Tobacco—I sell Tobacco—I Fox-hunt for my occasional pleasure. In my business, I have noticed that in this Southland where tobacco grows, The American Tobacco Company buys 'The Cream of the Crop' for their LUCKY STRIKE Cigarettes. I am glad to testify as to their quality; their growth is no surprise to me, because I know what goes into their manufacture."
